

aristocratic street, and mechanically I alighted and lifted out my companion. The hall door was flung open. The clasping hand of the young lady drew me gently within the vestibule—her musical voice called softly, at the door of a boudoir,—

"Alice, Richard has come!"

Instantly the door flew open, and a dark-haired, beautiful woman, came forth. She gazed at me an instant with unutterable bewildering eyes.

Verily, I was a favored individual!

An elderly gentleman, supporting himself by a cane, came forward.

"My name," now calling forward and saluted me, calling me his "dear son," and cutting short everything I attempted to say by his joyful volubility.

The folding door separated the sitting room and parlour were drawn apart. I heard the subdued hum of voices, the rustling of heavy silk, and waiting in the alcoved arch of an east window, I saw a clergyman in gown and band.

I glanced at Alice's dress. It was a brilliant white, and her beautiful hair was crowned with a wreath of orange blossoms.

The sight gave me a tremor. I felt weak and faint. My pallor must have alarmed Alice, for she clutched my arm wildly, and gazed into my face with painful anxiety.

"What is it, Richard? Are you ill?"

"Merciful heaven! Heaven look at him!"

"It is nothing—nothing!" I gasped, "Only, I cannot—cannot marry you!"

"Oh, heaven!" cried Alice, in horrified dismay; and seeing who was about to fall, I flung my arm around her for support.

At this moment the hall door opened and, turning at the sound, I saw with my own eyes, my second self enter the room. My exact counterpart! Richard Smith, No. 2.

His fierce eyes took in the scene at one glance. He rushed toward me with wild gesticulation, and tearing the half fainting Alice from my arms, he planted his firm grasp on my throat. I put my hands on the same locality of his body.

"What are you doing?" he thundered.

"What are you doing?" I thundered in response.

"Your life shall pay the forfeit!" he exclaimed, with mad violence. "The man who has dared to win Alice Herford's love shall die!"

"Gentlemen," interrupted the sweet voice of her whom they had called Helen, "be patient, there is some mistake. Which of you is named Richard Smith?"

"I am!" replied I.

"I am!" replied my counterpart.

"But which of you is Richard Smith, the son of Archibald Smith?"

"I am," said my second self.

"And I am not," said I. My father was named Robert.

Helen looked at me a moment, half in doubt, evidently at how to treat me after

"What had occurred. Finally she held out her hand.

"I beg pardon, Mr. Smith, it was all a careless mistake of my own. Can you forgive me?"

I thought of the kisses she had given me, and wished the same mistake might be made over again, though I was sensible enough not to make known my wish.

"Let me explain," she said frankly.

"We were just expecting my brother Richard home from the South, where he has been some four or five months past, and were quite sure he would arrive on the train which brought you; he has been for some years engaged to Miss Hereford, and the marriage ceremony was to take place immediately after his arrival. I went down to the depot to welcome him, and because of the striking similitude in your respective personal appearances, I mistook a stranger for my brother. That is all, Brother Richard, Mr Smith is entirely blameless of any wrong. Let me present you to each other as friends."

My counterpart shook hands with me, and begged my pardon for dislocating my necktie. I granted it, and begged his pardon for committing a like depredation to his necktie.

And then, at a sign from the elderly gentleman, we all walked into the drawing-room, where, in a brief space of time, my counterpart was made the husband of his blushing Alice.

The acquaintance so singularly begun with the Smith family, soon ripened into friendship, and became one of the most precious of life's blessings to me.

Helen Smith had kissed me and she could not forget it. "If a man can get a woman to think of him—it hardly matters in what way—he has a claim on her, and so it was in my case. I believe that I never met Helen but she blushed at the memory which stole over her.

Three months after our first meeting, she kissed me again and called me "Dear Richard." And this time she was aware that she was not addressing her brother.

Is it a fortunate or an unfortunate thing to have a counterpart? When I think of the boarding-house keeper, I say, "No," but when I look at Helen and recall the circumstances of our introduction, I am accustomed to answer "Yes."

GAMBLING AT THE ARKANSAS HOT SPRINGS.—The city is filled with gamblers, and cards were to be had everywhere.

employing time even by these who do not belong." That distinguished body called blacks. In the opinion of one of the oldest inhabitants, with whom I conversed recently, a radical and progressive step toward public morality was made last year. "The Council made the gamblers remove their rooms from the first to the second floor." Yet the city has one peculiar feature which might well be emulated in other places. No hotel contains a bar, and your sleep is never disturbed or broken by the staggering and shoutings that one has occasion to listen to in cities that claim a higher title to civilization than Hot Springs. Those who want to drink must go to a saloon, filled with every variety of wickedness that gambling develops. Professional etiquette does not compel the gambler to use any auxillary aid. He hunts his own prey, and is always on the lookout for it. I think the principal reason why so many patients who have come here for relief have become the victims of gamblers is that one has no way of amusing himself if he has no taste for reading, and if he has any desire for play it is the thing he will most likely fly to, and, should he fly to it, he is as certain of being skinned as an eel in a kitchen — New York Observer.

"In choosing a wife," says an exchange, "be governed by her chin." The worst of it is that, after choosing a wife, one is apt to keep on being governed in the same way.

THE TRAMP NUISANCE AND ITS REMEDY.

The Pennsylvania law which was formed under the impression that it would abate the tramp nuisance won't work any better than the tramp does. Tramps come and tramps go just the same as if there was no statute providing a remedy to the people living along the frequented paths of these ever present pedestrians. The trouble is that tramps are human beings, and are so regarded by the people of whom they solicit food and raiment. Although but one in a hundred may be deserving of charity, yet the fear that the one may suffer provides for the other ninety and nine. There is one test, however, what will tell a genuine tramp from a deserving wanderer. The tramp won't work. He prefers hunger and want to an hour of honest labor. He will steal articles which he cannot use in order to be arrested and provided comfortable quarters during the winter months in the county jail, where he can eat and sleep at the expense of the county, and where he need take no thought of the morrow. He even regards those who engage in manual labor as fools and is not apt to be niggardly in his expressions upon this point. The whole object of his existence appears to be to live without work.

But the great majority of our people have no work to offer in order to ascertain who are worthy and who are unworthy objects of charity. They cannot take in the stranger at the gates, and feed, clothe, and lodge him, for the fear would be ever present, and would generally be fulfilled, that their works of mercy would be rewarded with base ingratitude. They are therefore at present compelled for their own preservation, to resort to unsatisfactory methods of determining who are and who are not proper objects of their bounty.

This, we think, could in a great measure be remedied. Each township and borough should be compelled to take the matter in hand in its corporate capacity, making a certain amount of labor the equivalent for a meal of victuals or a night's lodging. For instance, a pile of limestone, with the necessary implements for breaking it into fragments of the requisite size to improve the highways, could be provided. When a tramp makes his appearance inside the corporation lines he should be directed to the heap of limestone, a hammer placed in his hands, and a certain amount of work required as an equivalent for a wholesome meal. If he is a deserving object he will rejoice in the opportunity afforded him of earning his daily bread if he is a regular and unadulterated tramp, he will quickly depart never to again return.

Such a scheme we are sure could be put in practical and successful operation. The sympathy strongly shown to alms-begging men, who are on the road from one year's end to another, would be replaced by directions where they could get work to relieve their pressing wants until something better was offered, and the community would soon be relieved of an army of vagabonds, whose presence in this country is becoming an increasing terror to the people.

—The New York Times, a few days after the election, said:

"The city rejoices at present in the possession of a county clerk and twelve aldermen elect who either are or recently were proprietors of drinking saloons. The bar room influence in politics would, therefore, seem to be in the ascendant and the results of its supremacy in the past do not encourage the hope that they will be a counterpoise to disastrous in the future. While the people nominally elected this large party of rum-sellers to public office, they certainly in no sense of the word selected them. They are merely the choice of certain bosses, who find the corner grocery the most powerful center of the political influence to which they owe their power, and they will continue to be chosen while Democrats can call themselves respectable are found willing to do the work of the lowest elements of their party."

If the Republican party proposes to regain public confidence it will have to pay a little less attention to the saloon element and a little more to the wishes of the enlightened portion of its constituency.

—It has been frequently predicted that Nebraska would suffer a loss of emigration in consequence of the prohibitory amendment. Mr. A. S. Johnson, Land Commissioner of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad of that state, says upon this point: "For the past year our sales have been steadily increasing from month to month, until at the present date our business is unprecedented in the history of this department; and a notable feature in this connection is the unusual number of cash purchasers, showing that settlers of more means are coming into the state."

It is not probable that any state will suffer a loss of desirable population by the adoption of a policy calculated as the prohibition movement, to elevate and improve the people. On the contrary immigration of a desirable class will be promoted by it.

—It is announced semi-officially that General Sherman, the General-in-Chief of the Army, will retire from the service in the fall of next year, after he has made his annual report for the present fiscal year and has otherwise carefully closed up his affairs, although his compulsory retirement under the law would not take place until the spring of 1884. Lieutenant-General Sheridan will succeed him.

HOLIDAY AND FASHION NOTES.

Velveten grows popular. Very wide linen collars are again in vogue. Chenille plays a most important role in trimmings this season. The fashion of wearing the jacket and waist of a different color and material from the skirt grows in favor. Bonnet crowns completely shingled with small feather - will be much worn. Dark myrtle green and royal blue red-tinged of fine ladies' cloth, with shoulder capes and revers cuffs of plush or velvet a shade darker than the cloth, are much worn over plain skirts of silk or cashmere, trimmed around the bottom with a chiffon ruching. Among pretty devices on gray linen lambrequins for dining room mantelpieces, or scarfs for dining room chairs and other pieces of furniture: are cups and saucers, knives and forks, and antique pitchers and bottles put on with aesthetic colors in applique with outline embroidery. A silk kerchief, close around the throat, inside the wrap, is the proper neckwear with a seal skin jacket, or fur-lined garment. At J. Wesley Wright's store a fine assortment can be seen. When the purse is too slender to send a Christmas gift, the Christmas card is the proper substitute. Bradford, on Radcliffe street, has an endless assortment, many of which for fine conception and artistic execution, are certainly to be admired.

—At the present moment in Russia the attention of the press and society in all the large towns is concentrated on the daily announcements of bank failures, speculation, embezzlement, frauds, and robberies of every kind. Scarcely a day passes without the news of some bank having been insolvent or in a critical condition, or of some cashier of a Government institution or benevolent society having appropriated the fund and "cooked" the accounts. Municipal Bank of Skopin, in the province of Riazan, has failed for over $90,000,000. It is a legal point whether in this instance the whole of the inhabitants, through their municipal authorities, will not be held responsible. It is calculated that the embezzlement and robberies, both private and official, have this year amounted to over $18,750,000.

—There are several Territories seeking admission into the Union, and two of them, Dakota and Washington, will probably be admitted at the present session of Congress. There is no just reason why they should not be, as they both contain a much greater population than several heretofore admitted. For the Democrats to oppose the measure on the score that they would be Republican States and would increase the Republican strength in the Senate, when no one can tell what a year may produce in the politics of a State, would be sheer nonsense, for on such ground no new State would ever be admitted, if under such circumstances, it could be prevented by one party or the other.

HOLIDAY EXCURSIONS.—It has for many years been the custom of the Pennsylvania Railroad to make reduced rates for round-trip tickets extending over the Holidays, and it is announced by the Passenger Department that the practice will be observed this year on not only the Pennsylvania Railroad but on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore, West Jersey, Northern Central, Baltimore and Potomac, and the Philadelphia and Erie Railroads. Reduced rate round-trip tickets will be sold on December 23d, 24th and 25th, good to return until the 2d of January, and on the 30th and 31st of December and the 1st of January, good to return until the 2d of January.

—A St. Louis expert in sharp shooting convinced a reporter that such fancy shots as Frayne and others have performed on the stage are not so difficult as they seem, the distance being very short and the apple or other target placed considerably above the head on which it rests. The novice tried the backward shot, with a bit of looking glass, in the manner which caused the death of Miss Von Bohren in Cincinnati, and accomplished it several times, with no failures. But some experiments in a Detroit bar room were less successful. A young man who tried to imitate Frayne's marksmanship, being unsteady through drink, badly wounded a companion.

—An application was made in Common Pleas Court, No. 2, Pittsburg, Saturday, which is the first instance of the kind that ever occurred in this State. This was the application of Mrs. P. S. Breckenridge, of Allegheny, for naturalization papers. Mrs. Breckenridge has been in this country thirty-one years, and having come when under age, needed but one paper, which was granted. The lady is going to Europe and desired to be a citizen of the United States before her departure.

—Governor Hoyt is named the 21st instant as the time and the State Library at Harrisburg as the place for the presentation to the State of a portrait of General G. W. Crawford, the Pennsylvania Reserve Association being the giver. General Hancock and other noted men have been invited to be present.

—The city Bank of Rochester, N. Y., closed its doors yesterday, that action having been compelled by the misappropriation of several hundreds of thousands of dollars of the bank's money by the president, C. E. Upson, who used it to speculate in oil. The amount of deposit in the bank is stated to be $500,000, and the amount of paper held by the bank to be $800,000.

THE BEST PRACTICAL ART MAGAZINE.

—The Art Amateur for 1883, judging from the publishers' announcement, will amply maintain its high reputation as the "best practical art magazine" of the day. To an abundance of beautiful, full-size working designs for painting, embroidery, wood carving and other art work, with copious practical instructions for all classes of amateur artists, it will continue to add a profusion of charming illustrations of porcelain, furniture, needlework, and bric-a-brac, together with an endless supply of entertaining information on decorative and industrial art. Numerous artists' sketches will be published as usual, the leading exhibitions will be largely illustrated and piquantly criticized, and artists of merit will be biographically noticed. A series of beautiful embroidery designs from the South Kensington Royal School of Art Needlework, and a number of articles on china painting by Miss McLaughlin of Cincinnati, will be published during the year. It is not too much to declare, with the Long Academy (which places it above any magazine of the kind in England), that the Art Amateur is a "marvel of variety, beauty, and cheapness." This opinion may be readily verified by sending thirty-five cents for a specimen copy to Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York. The subscription price is $1 a year.

—If some of the Republicans who contributed to the defeat of their party last fall had doubts about the wisdom of their course at the time, those doubts have long since been removed. The moral effect of their action was tremendous. That defeat has done the party more good than anything that has happened to it since its formation. Even if the party fails to rally from the crushing effects of a disaster it rashly invited, the country is reaping an advantage which would have been beyond its reach if the popular independence had not asserted its convictions. For in no other way could Congress have been forced to the point of enacting the Pendleton bill, and the enactment of that bill will mark one of the great turning points in the political history of the United States—a point which had to be reached, and very soon, and which might otherwise have been precipitated upon the Nation in the form of anarchy born of the hot contest of factions over the spoils.—Union Herald (Rep.)

—The Democrats have only to kick against reform to kick over their own bucket. The great obstacle to Democratic success for years has been the opposition of the business community to undergoing the risk of having a Democratic President go in and turn out 100,000 officials and turn in 100,000 new men, who on the most favorable estimate would average one incompetent or one scoundrel out of every four. That is a risk the country does not want to run and won't run. Nobody is more vitally interested than the Democratic party in reducing that risk. If it is not reduced, a Democratic victory is highly improbable. It is in the interest of both parties to free the country from the terror of a "clean sweep" as the penalty of a change in the party administration. The Democrats ought to see this, if anybody can.—Springfield Republican (Ind.)

—There is some prospect of Indiana stepping to the front as a banner Republican State. Three hundred and three school houses were erected by that Commonwealth this present year.—Consolidated

—A Philadelphia man, detained by business, spent a recent Sunday in Baltimore. In the evening he went into a saloon and took a drink, several men who were present drinking with him. The next morning he was astonished by a summons to appear before the Circuit Court as a witness to prove that the saloon keeper had violated the Sunday law. He acknowledged that he had taken a drink in the place named, and when asked if others were present, promptly pointed out two of the jurymen as his chance companions of the night before. "That will do," interrupted the foreman hastily, "that will do, you can go home," and the Philadelphia was politely escorted to the door by a bailiff.

—Fifty-eight million dollars is the estimated value of finger rings of this country actually worn, and still there are people mean enough to go back and coughing because they do not want to invest 25 cents for a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

—Goldsmith's Hall, situated on the south side of Liberty street, below Fifth, Philadelphia, was destroyed by fire last night, involving a loss of over $300,000.

—Wills' "Health Restorer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia, Impotency, Sexual Debility, &c.

—The United States is not the only government reducing its public debt.—France, last year, reduced the debt of that Republic 10,100,000 francs.

Suffering is Needless.
